Indications on Wall Street Point to Speedy Revival of Investment

BY BROADAN WALL. York, January 18.-When the rystals of Wall Street history during 1918 are polarized by time, the sugar of profits will be found in the phemenal advance of Standard Oil securities, at a time, too, when speculathe Stock Exchange was abnormally dull, with prices ruling at the low level of 1907. Oil production in 1913 exceeded by 17,000,000 barrels, the output of the Oil production in 1913 exceeded, by 17,000,000 barrels, the output of the previous year, and prices for the refined product showed continual advances. Fortunately, the outside speculation in these stocks has been almost entirely on a cash basis, and there is no indication of a material collapse in prices. Huge profits were made in Eussian oil stocks, and the activity of the royal Dutch-Shell syndicate and be anxiety of British interests to exhe anxiety of British Interests to ex-end their oil concessions in Central South America, is a matter of

Announces Candidacy for United States
Scante from Hilmois.

[Special to The Times Dispatch.]
Chicago, January 18.—Roger C. Sullivan has made formal announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, subject to the result of the direct primaries of September 9. The former Democratic National Committeeman issued a statement, in which he outlined his platform. He says the program evolved by President Wilson is "clearer, closer to the ground, and contains less hair-splitting than that conceived by anybody within fifty years." If elected, Mr. Sullivan declares it to be his purpose to do his part in carrying out the President's policies. He declares for an adjustment of business to the advance-in political thought in State and nation. He promises publicity of campaign funds and expenditures, and declares his willingness to answer any questions put to him during the campaign.

Commercial Association of Danville Will Seek to Interest Citizens.

Ispecial to The Times-Dispatch.]
Danville, Va., January 18.—The Commercial Association of Danville is on the verge of starting a money-getting campaign. The funds in the treasury are at present at a low ebb, and the citizens are to be asked to join the association and to give subscriptions. The gross income of the association at present is very poor, being only about $1,000 a year, whereas, similar organizations in other Southern cities no larger than Danville derive much more. The local association has fathered many spendid projects in this city, the benefits of which have been felt throughout this section. Among them is the good roads movement, which is gaining impetus every month. On February I Dudley V. Haddock, a journalist from Tampa, Fla., will become the active secretary of the organization. He will succeed the late W. A. Moorman, who died a few months ago.

The recent issue of preferred stock by the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills, the subscription to which closed on Thursday, was a success. While 5,000 shares were offered the subscriptions ran far beyond that number by nearly 3,000 shares. The cotton mill corporation had a good year it reports, although the high cost of the raw material has injugated somewhat against the profits. The new milliondollar mill is rapidly nearing completion, and in some parts of it the machinery is running.
